Sam Lytle is an associate in the Medical Malpractice Defense Practice Group at Goodell DeVries. He works on cases involving allegations of medical negligence on behalf of healthcare providers and organizations in Maryland and Washington, D.C.

Sam earned a J.D. from the University of Maryland Carey School of Law, where he gained significant academic experience in the healthcare space. He served as an Editor of the school's Health Law Journal and earned a Health Law Certificate. Sam also gained meaningful practical experience through his work as a student attorney in the school's Medical Legal Partnership clinic and as a medical malpractice law clerk at three private practice firms. Sam also volunteered to mentor troubled youth through the Baltimore Outreach for Student Success (BOSS) program.

Prior to starting his legal career, Sam served as an intelligence analyst in the United States Marine Corps and completed two deployments to Afghanistan.
